Former Head Counselor Demands Investigation of Scheduling Chaos

as reported by Yves F. Leperdoodle.

Members of the Volleyball consortium broke ranks today and called for an investigation as to the whereabouts of the missing Friday-night Volleyball Games (FVG). The Management remained unfazed by this criticism and continued to tout its policies as “neo-progressive” and blamed the previous leadership for any failures to actually play games. Nonetheless the Volleyball Consortium is considering an investigation to determine what has gone wrong with a once smoothly running operation. Rumors of the appointment of an independent counsel to lead the investigation are in the air, apparently fanned by a leading candidate for that position, former Minister of Propaganda James Warner. When asked if he might be too partisan he replied, “How can you be too patriotic, sheesh! Of course I’m a patriot and damn proud of it as well. You little pinko. Anyways, these types of positions are often filled by retirees and being on leave is like being retired, expect you are younger and in my case, better looking.”

One member of the Volleyball consortium who has publicly denounced the missing FVGs is Head Counselor Mike “Bat-man” Malmon-Berg. In a statement released today by his spokeswoman Sophie Malmon-Berg he claims that the handling of the Friday Night Volleyball scheduling has been a disaster and that someone’s head should “bobble” (to see slightly edited version click on MMB report.pdf). In fact, his suggestion was that Her Highness of Intelligence Gathering and Other Nasty Business AJ Stavenezer (HIGONB) have a “bobble head”. HIGONB could not be reached for comment as she was currently interrogating captured Oberlin faculty at an undisclosed site. Mr. Malmon-Berg has proposed that an investigation be started to determine who is to blame for the current erratic scheduling. His recommendation is that a respected retired faculty member be appointed to lead the investigation. However, other consortium members chose former MOP James Warner instead. This was thought to be a sign of growing support in the Consortium for the exiled leadership pair of former MOP James Warner and former YFL Dean Fraga. It certainly would provide a high profile for former MOP James Warner should he decide to run as the new YFL. How this would affect his sometimes testy relationship with the former YFL was unknown but the word “puppet regime” comes to mind quite unexpectedly.

While details need to be worked out, it appears likely that an investigation will take place. How this will affect The Management’s hold on the reins of power is a subject of some debate among consortium insiders who bother to read these things. However, a well-placed source offers this, “This is gonna get nasty. You have two parties who want nothing more than the annihilation of the other party. One side might even contemplate the use of weapons of mass disgust. Of course I wouldn’t know anything about where I hid, .. I mean, they are hidden.”

On that note let us all upgrade our spam filters, invest in Lysol, and hope that the coming struggle is over quickly.
