

SECTION XIII. Demonstrations and the Right of Dissent

Every member of the community has the right to speak freely, the right to listen to others, the right to assemble in public meetings, and the right to express him/herself. Because these rights are for each member of the community, it follows that no member of the community has the right to prevent or to disrupt an exercise of such rights by others, whether the persons involved are expressing approval or disapproval of an idea or of an action.
