Interruptor

Freedlander Theatre

7:00pm

Open seating, no reservations necessary

Interruptor is a look at two boys coming of age in the digital era. It explores what it means to be human in our mass media culture and how we form relations in a world where connections seem to be made only through technology. This is a hilarious comedy and will be performed in English.

Hebras

Schoolroy Theatre

9:00pm

Only 100 seats available! To get reservations email jnoriega@wooster.edu.

Hebras is a wordless physical-theatre piece with movement, music, dance, puppets, and mask work. It is about human relationships and issues of identity, independence, and dependency.

Both pieces run 50 minutes and will be followed with a Q&A from the director and actors. Light refreshments will be served between the performances.
